Born in the Surrey hills surrounded by nature and art my upbringing was full of creativity. From a young age I was instinctively drawn to making, through exploring many different types of media such as textiles, printmaking and glassblowing I finally found myself most drawn to silversmithing. It has allowed me to create art with functionality as well as meaning and beauty which has always been my goal

During my foundation year at Central Saint Martins I was given the freedom to explore ideas and being allowed to push concepts into reality further developed my fascination with silversmithing.

Studying at The University of Edinburgh in the Jewellery Design and Silversmithing department has allowed my passion for silversmithing to blossom and thrive. During my degree I was honoured to be recognised for my work by being selected to take part in Hamilton and Inches 10 week internship as well as receiving South Square trusts precious metal grant.

Bobbin lace has been my main inspiration for my graduate collection. Looking at the outcomes, tools and objects used to create lace I aim to inform my audience through my works about this endangered craft. I have always found lace and woven textile fibres fascinating, exploring how they can be translated into metal and observing the negative space that is created in lace making is my main focus.
